Keres Grows with Appointment of Project Support Specialist

Firm announces new hire Erik Jusenius to support website for environmental impacts on tribal lands nationwide

Missoula, MT – June 21, 2010 – Keres Consulting, Inc., a Native American-owned general management consulting firm headquartered in Albuquerque, NM, today announced that it has hired Erik Jusenius as a Project Support Specialist. Mr. Jusenius will support the Native American Management System for Environmental Impacts (NAMSEI) website for the Department of Defense Native American Lands Environmental Mitigation Program (NALEMP). Keres is a member of the Small Business Administration’s 8(a) program and specializes in asset management and sustainability; engineering and the environment; communication; and Native American solutions.

As a Project Support Specialist, Mr. Jusenius will analyze and summarize detailed technical reports; perform data entry; provide end-user assistance via telephone and email to support the NAMSEI website; perform annual reviews of data; develop and execute data audit procedures; compile, input and prepare project documentation, presentations, and briefings; provide testing for a Web-based application; and assist in the development and maintenance of general project reports, operating procedures and spreadsheets to support project objectives.

“Keres strives to hire and retain high-caliber employees to ensure our government customers receive unsurpassed services,” said Timothy Chavez, President and CEO of Keres. “We’re extremely happy to have Erik join the Keres team. His previous work experience and enthusiasm for the NALEMP project makes him the perfect person for this position.”

Mr. Jusenius brings with him work experience in Project Management and Human Resources. In addition, he has held Web development and help desk positions in the industries of software, telecommunications, insurance, and online services.
